Your Property Look Alike and Sound Alike Posted by Javier Valiente on September 21st, 2018 Most people think they live in a quiet community, but for the past few years I've noticed a disturbing trend. Since I've moved here, I've been complaining about the loud music and rock 'n' roll of house parties that I now hear every night. It's so loud, people are basically shouting at each other. I have a hard time going to sleep. My neighbors agree with me. "I can't sleep when there is constant noise coming from your house," they complain. But the community is finally listening. The City of Antioch has finally taken action. It is one of many cities across the country that has been cracking down on the noise coming from a house party. Currently, there is an ordinance in place that allows the city to issue fines of up to $2,000 per incident. In addition, the city has the authority to fine people $500 every month. However, these fines can be waived if the resident is found to be responsible for the noise and has taken certain measures to solve the issue. If the noise continues to increase, the city will increase the fines, as well as the number of violations that will be written. I'm sure we all know someone who is hosting a party, and if that person has not taken steps to solve the noise, then there will definitely be another party. But the real issue here is that party hosts should be taking measures to resolve this problem. They can eliminate the noise, close the windows, or turn down the music. It seems that a lot of parties are becoming too large, and in most cases, these party hosts are doing nothing to solve the problem. But the city is now starting to take this seriously. This is a start. Share this: Like this: LikeLoading... Related About Javier Valiente I am an ordained pastor and the senior pastor of St. Anthony the Great Catholic Church in Concord.
